TINLEY WOMEN FIRST IN STATE TO SERVE AT VAUGHN HOSPITAL

On Monday, April 1, Vaughn General hospital at Hines, Ill., was officially turned over to the Veterans Administration by Brig. Gen. Percy J. Carroll. The symbolic ceremony was held in the hospital gym where a huge beribboned key was presented to Dr. Warren A. Colton, manager of Hines Hospital. The ceremony took place in the presence of many service connected and civic organizations.

From this time forward, only those patients who are no longer in the service of their country will be hospitalized at Vaughn. For the past two weeks, certain types of patients have been moved from Hines to Vaughn and the wards at Hines filled with surgical patients.

Five Tinley Park women were privileged to be the first in the State to serve at Vaughn Hospital. On Wednesday, March 27 Gertrude Jacobs, Edna Clark, Anne Dahl, Barbara Barry and Ethelyn Mehren were sent into a 200 bed ward with treats for the patients from the American Legion Auxiliary. This organization was the first to be allowed inside the guarded enclosure while it was still under Army supervision.

Five baskets were loaded in the office of the American Legion Auxiliary at Hines Hospital and carried from there to Vaughn where passes were issued, the baskets inspected and an escort furnished to the Ward to be served. The men in the ward had formerly been at Hines and had not been served with treats for several weeks, so the ladies were enthusiastically received. Many of the patients were paralytics who were unable to amuse themselves and were very grateful for the diversion brought them. Among the many things taken into the wards were a package of cigarettes for each man, matches, Easter cards with stamped envelopes, chess and checker games, condensed copies of a popular magazine for each man, soap, talcum powder, shaving cream, brushes, razor blades, tooth brushes, tooth powder, candy bars and oranges.

On Thursday evening, Mrs. Jacobs, Mrs. Mehren and Dena Hansen assisted at a Bingo party for the men at Hines given by the Cook County Council of the American Legion Auxiliary. $5.00 prizes were given for each game fifty door prizes were awarded and a magician, a boy pianist and a boy accordionist entertained the men who sat about in the big recreation hall. Ice cream, cookies, crackerjack and a package of cigarettes was given each man at the close of the evening.

"The men enjoy any type of entertainment which is brought to them but they can't possibly enjoy it as much as do the ladies who are privileged to serve them", was Mrs. Jacobs' comment at the parties' close.

Our next trip to Hines will be Wednesday April 24. We are anxiously looking for clothing to take with us at this time. Please contact Mrs. Jacobs, Tinley 593 or Mrs. Mehren, 617. We will be glad to pick them up.

—Harriet Dini, Publicity chairman

BALMY WEATHER SIDETRACKED

The balmy summer weather of the past week which shattered previous March records, appears to be side tracked with another cold wave taking its last departing fling.

The extremely unseasonable weather has caused trees and shrubs to bud to such an extent, that if a killing frost should come now, the fruit crop for this season would be killed.

Some early gardeners, have their gardens well under way which would also suffer great damage, in case of a freeze. Farmers have started field work in earnest, although some fields are still quite wet. Many farmers have their oat crop in.

NO MORE CANVASSING WILL BE TOLERATED IN MOKENA

Gyp artists often mulch many dollars from the public on fake magazine and household appliances and other rackets. The Mokena village board has just passed an ordinance prohibiting canvassing and soliciting in the corporate limits of the village. Signs are being erected at all entrances to the village calling attention to the fact that itinerant canvassers are barred.

Another good move on the part of the Board is the passing of an ordinance prohibiting posting placards on posts and fences within the village limits which makes the village have an unsightly appearance.

TINLEY SERVICE MEN HOMECOMING A COLORFUL AFFAIR

During the days of the war, Charles Hollwedell, genial proprietor of the Saenger hall and Tavern in Tinley Park, said that when the war was over he would throw a party for the servicemen and women of Tinley Park and community and last Saturday he made good his promise when he feted 150 guests at a chicken dinner in the Saenger hall. Speaker gave a fine touch to the program following which a huge group picture of the service group was taken. The Hall was then cleared and a dance was enjoyed to the music of the popular Palletti orchestra of Coal City.

The program was opened with a welcome address by Mayor Wesley J. Stemm.

Mr. Maxwell past commander of the Tinley Park Legion Post No. 615 and of the Bremen Post 2791 of the VFW, was the master of ceremonies.

The parade was headed by a color guard and the crack Blue Island Legion Band which played a stirring selection as the service group entered the hall. Hugh welcome home signs were displayed. This grand celebration will be remembered for a long time and much credit is due Mr. Hollwedell for his fine patriotic spirit.

COAL STRIKE DOES NOT EFFECT MOKENA

PLAN TO GREATLY INCREASE STREET ILLUMINATION

For the past two months the Public Service Co., has been engaged in drawing up plans for a new street lighting system for Mokena to supersede the present overhead type of light. The new system calls for 25 pole type street lights for the business section of the town. The lights would be of the same design as used by the city of Polo, Illinois, said to be one of the very best in the state. The new lights are rated to give 13 times more light than the present lamps at an increase of only $10 per month over the present rate.

The Mokena council is favoring the adoption of the General Electric style of equipment. The new system may be placed in operation this summer.

The Public Service Co., is not making any charge for their work in setting up the plans for the lighting system.

The proposed system will be a wonderful improvement and will definitely be something Mokena can be proud of.

W. N. U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Mac tells Sherwin that Jane is going to marry Stenhart. "I think she will not," he replied. Stenhart Mac stated that the sheriff had a picture of "someone that's wanted." Sheriff Cutler had shown the picture to Jim too. Murder, first degree, escaped from Rhode Island. "I don't think he's around these parts," Jim replied. Jane too saw the picture, and Stenhart panted: "Don't let him kill me!" Sherwin admitted to Jane that he was the man they wanted. Jim advised him to "melt away." Feeling like an outcast, Sherwin goes to Old Mac's shack where the foreman has a meal ready for him. "Aint no use starvin'," says Mac.

CHAPTER VI

"Do you know why I'm wanted?" Sherwin asked, still standing. The old fellow nodded. "Seen th' paper you had in your pocket, Sherwin. You'd marked the description, and it dropped t'other day an' I saw it. Th' sheriff talked some, too, when we were goin' to look for th' place where Jordan jumped the creek. I ain't askin' questions. You sit down an' eat."

Sherwin sat down. "You're a good man," he said chokingly. "I'm old," said MacDowell quizzically. "I ain't dead set on punishing other folks."

"Except Jordan," said Sherwin. Mac laughed. "Well, maybe! Eat, son, you may have a long hike. You can't take th' trains; Cutler'll have your picture up in 'em."

"You said a while ago—when you were tending my arm—that Miss Keller was to marry Stenhart. Is that true?"

MacDowell considered, pulling on his pipe. "I've heard Jim say so. You don't like Stenhart?"

"He's my cousin," Sherwin said in a flat, emotionless voice.

The old man started and took his pipe out of his mouth. "Gosh!" he ejaculated, and stared at the young man dumbly.

"He's my cousin and his testimony sent me to jail for life," said Sherwin, and his voice shook. "He lied. He lied me out of the way for fear I'd break our uncle's will. He got everything."

"An' you're accused of killin' th' uncle because he'd cut you off, ain't that it?" Mac leaned his elbows on the table, looking across it at the shadowed face of Sherwin.

The latter nodded. "The old story," he said shortly. "Uncle was killed in the garden. He was stabbed while he slept on the old bench by the cedars. I'd just found him when Max came in the gate; he'd been up the street at the newsstand. He swore I had the knife in my hand. It was perjury but he got away with it. Uncle and I had had a difference the day before, and people knew of it. That went against me, and Max swore me into jail for life. That's all."

Mac was silent for a while, then he grunted. "Did you tell Jim about it?"

Sherwin laughed bitterly. "He wouldn't believe me if I did! The jury didn't. I've served eight years. I was twenty-two when I was sentenced. Ever been in jail?" he asked ironically.

"Come mighty near it once, son. Punchin' a rogue's head got me arrested, but somehow th' judge kinder agreed with me that it needed punchin'."

"It's like being in hell—to shut a healthy man up behind stone walls for life," Sherwin said bitterly. "I won't be taken if I can help it; I'd rather die—only I've got something to do first."

The old man looked across under the lamplight again; something in the white face opposite moved him deeply. Sherwin was a stranger, he was an escaped convict, yet—

"Don't do it, son," old Mac said gently. Sherwin, startled, raised his bloodshot eyes to his. "You know?"

"I reckon I do!" Sherwin rose and began to walk about the room. "I came out here to find him. He wasn't in his usual haunts in the city—so they told me—and I tracked him patiently, tracked him to Keller's ranch, when I stumbled into your accident and motored you here. It was pure luck, I thought, to get here so easily—without credentials, too!"

MacDowell nodded. "He's gettin' well an' he's sure to hang around Jane."

Sherwin said nothing, but his hands clenched until the nails bit into the palms. In the silence the little room seemed full of Jane's presence. Again he saw her eyes change, saw her recoil! A shudder ran through him, fury leaped up in him, he remembered Stenhart's white face, his cowardly cry: "Don't let him kill me!" Again he paced up and down.

Old MacDowell rose slowly, stretching his uninjured arm. "Th' sheriff'll be around here for a spell, maybe thirty-six hours. You can't hardly miss him if you try to get out now; some of 'em will meet up with you. I tell you what I'll do—you come along with me now, before moonrise, an' I'll fix you up. I've just been figurin' it out."

Sherwin stopped in his pacing and looked at him, strangely touched. "How about Keller?" He wanted me to get out at once."

"You ain't goin' to stay on th' ranch; you follow me," Mac picked up the food-pack and opened the door.

A sudden gust of wind blew out the lamp. In the dark Sherwin pressed his hands over his eyes; he was trying to shut out Jane's face! "We're goin' to th' stables; ain't no one there, an' we can saddle up," "I can't take a horse from here!" Sherwin exclaimed sharply. "Easy, son, I'll lend you mine to-night," said Mac. "I can ride one of the ranch horses; we ain't goin' so terrible far."

They went to the stables and old MacDowell brought out the horses. Sherwin hated to lay a hand on one of them but he mounted when the old man told him the roan was his own property. Silently, after that, they rode past the ranch-house and out on to the twisting mountain road. Five miles up in the redwoods they passed the limits of Las Palomas. The wind from the hills grew cold, but the sky was brightening; the highest peaks were already touched with moonlight. Sherwin turned in his saddle and looked down. Below him lay the ranch; he could just see the lights in the house, mere pinpoints of brightness. Darkness, like a velvet cloak, had fallen on the valley. He drew a deep breath. Jane was there, Jane, who had repudiated him with her chill look, and Stenhart! His hand clenched. Stenhart's lie had sent him to prison, it pursued him still. Resolve was hardening in him, he could not go until he had killed him. He rode on again but, all the while, he was aware of those lights down there in the darkness. He had lived eight years in prison but he was still young. The girl's eyes, her voice, her soft hands on his wounded arm, had kindled a flame; now the flame was made fiercer, more terrible, by jealousy. Stenhart was with her!

Then suddenly he was roused from his fierce reverie. Old Mac drew rein.

"Get down," he said briefly. "We can hobble th' horses, we've got to hoof it the rest of the way."

The moon was rising over the top of the mountains as Sherwin swung himself out of the saddle. They had left the road and were on a mountain trail; great trees surrounded them, their spreading boughs making a dense shade through which the rising moon shot, here and there, an arrowhead of light. MacDowell led, and, as they advanced, the almost imperceptible trail grew narrower, tree-trunks of gigantic size locked them in; far off was the sound of rushing water, a mere murmur at their ears.

"Walk slow," Mac cautioned him, "th' path's mighty narrow in front now an' a mite treacherous. We're coming to the edge of a precipice, ain't nothing to save you if you fall."

"I hear water somewhere," said Sherwin.

"Mighty pretty little cascade below us, 'bout two hundred feet. It's too far down for th' moonlight to strike it yet—mind th' turn now—there, you can see th' way, it's mighty steep."

They stood on a narrow ledge. Some convulsion of nature had long ago ripped out the side of the slope. Behind them was a bit of sheer rock; on either side the great trees stopped and there was only a narrow path at the edge of a deep ravine. Far down a turbulent little river roared over the broken rocks and tumbled from a high cliff into the depth below. The moonlight revealed a sheer precipice with nothing reaching out from it but one old, gnarled tree.

"A mighty bad place to slip, Sherwin said musingly; 'easy to thrust a man over there—to his death!'"

Old Mac grunted. "Mighty easy—but you ain't goin' to get th' chance, he's too lame a duck to get this far!"

Sherwin felt the hot blood burn in his face; how easily the old man had read his mind!

Mac stopped now and pointed, ignoring what he had just said. "Th' cabin's hid in there—among them trees. I built it most forty years ago. I hadn't no health those days; doc said I'd got to live out, up here in the redwoods, so I knocked up th' shack. There used to be mighty good shootin' an' fishin'. It's stood weather better'n I expected. There ain't nobody knows about it—except Jane; she saw it once, I fetched her up here. You can camp here safe enough till I bring you word where Cutler's gone."

Sherwin, looking ahead into the dense shadows of the mountainside, saw a light. Both men stood still, electrified.

"By gosh!" Mac caught at his companion's arm and gripped it, listening. "I'm darned if Jordan ain't up here—sure as shootin'!" he whispered.

"In your cabin?" Sherwin smiled grimly, loosening his pistol in the shoulder holster.

MacDowell cautioned him to silence with a gesture and they both crept forward. As they did so, Sherwin discerned the outline of a little cabin set in under a sycamore. A rectangle of light appeared, the door was open! Softly, step by step, the two men approached, keeping in the shadow. Sherwin slipped behind the house and looked in the window. A man was sitting on the floor, smoking and reading a newspaper by the light of a candle. It was the outlaw! Sherwin signaled to MacDowell and the old man came softly over and looked in. The man was an easy mark, but they did not shoot, both loved fair play too well. Making a sign to Mac, Sherwin went quickly toward the thicker shadows of the trees in front of the cabin, then, deliberately and slowly, he began to tramp down dry twigs and make the noise a man might make in carelessly approaching from the woods back of the ravine. The sounds reached the rustler's ears. He extinguished the candle and stepped outside the door.

"That you, Kenny?" For answer Sherwin sprang forward, pistol in hand, and old Mac emerged from behind the cabin with a roar.

"We've got you now, you skunk!" he shouted.

The outlaw dodged, dropped to his knees, rolled over like a ball and went spinning down the slope, Sherwin's bullet speeding after him. A sailing cloud suddenly obscured the moon and, in the darkness, a gun flashed below them and a bullet whistled past. They heard a scrambling fall. Sherwin fired again into the dark, a man cursed and silence followed.

"Darn that cloud, I can't see a thing!" old Mac whispered. "You think Jordan's down there, Sherwin?"

Sherwin, who had gone to the edge of the ravine and came back after the last shot, answered as softly. "Yes! I can hear him scramble—I'm hanged if I know how he got away without falling over the precipice! There comes the moon—back out of range or he'll pick you off, MacDowell!"

They both stepped back into the shadow of the cabin and waited, expecting a rush by Jordan and his confederates, but nothing happened. Far below them they heard a twig snap and some gravel slide.

"Comin', I reckon!" Mac whispered.

Sherwin shook his head. "Still going, the same man. Very likely he gone for help."

"That's true, ain't any use stayin' here to be shot at!" As he spoke he felt his way into the cabin.

"Want to risk lighting the candle?" Sherwin asked him from the door. "I've got matches."

"Nope! We'd be targets sure then. I can see from th' moon. Where you goin'?"

"I'm going to stay here."

"You'll have to give th' cabin up, son; you'd have a batch of them rustlers to fight—if he comes back."

"And the sheriff on the road," Sherwin replied grimly.

"That's true!" Mac thought a moment. "I say, Sherwin, you'd better just keep under the trees for th' night an' skip at daybreak. The posse'll be most likely tired an' restin'. You'll get some hours at night."

Sherwin nodded. He had other plans, but he would not tell them. He grasped the old man's hand. "Come, I'm going to see you off safe with the horses, then I'll come back here quietly."

Mac protested, grumbling, but he finally let the younger man accompany him to the road. His lame arm still made the old man more or less awkward. Sherwin helped him get the two horses and saw him mount.

"You skip at daybreak," Mac said kindly, and leaned from the saddle to hold out his hand again. "I don't believe you did it," he ended brusquely.

Sherwin wrung his hand and stood under the trees, watching him go. The old man's blunt sympathy and active help had touched him to the quick. He watched until the old figure in the saddle and the two horses became mere specks on the white road toward Las Palomas.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Apprenticeship Training Plans for Veterans

State approved labor-management committees are now recognized by the veterans' administration as institutions eligible to provide apprenticeship courses for veterans under Public Law 16, for disabled veterans, and under the G.I. bill of rights.

The committees when approved by the appropriate state agency will be responsible for: (1) acceptance of applications for veterans training; (2) determination of establishments in which training is to be provided; (3) arranging for placement of veteran and (4) assurance the establishment is providing a standard course.

Veterans administration commitments on homes under the guaranty provisions of the G.I. bill now amounts to $134,545,000, on business loans, $6,814,000, and on farms, $2,721,205. Of 97,728 applications for loans received up to February 23, 81,632 were approved. There were 73,553 applications for loans on homes approved, 2,233 on farms and 5,576 on business loans.

Approximately one in four of the 10,610,000 veterans discharged as of March 1, have enrolled for readjustment compensation and survey shows that the average veteran only draw about five or six weeks' allowance. Approximately 2,500,000 have received compensation and less than half that number are currently enrolled. Some 500,000 withdrew their claims before receiving first checks. This indicates the peak of demobilization has passed and that veterans are rapidly obtaining jobs, the VA said.

Questions and Answers

Q. My brother, after being discharged last March, 1945, from the marines for wounds received on Guam, is now called to the hospital for observation for 30 days. Will his wife and children receive any allotment or aid from the government while he is there?—Reader, Webster, Mass.

A. If your brother was actually separated from the marines and obtained his honorable discharge, the answer is no. The general rule is that he cannot be discharged unless he is physically fit. It could be that some repair job was done and surgeons wanted to check it at the end of a year.

Q. My son enlisted in the navy in May, 1945. He had an allotment paper made out and sent to me, but at the time I did not feel that I really needed it and did not fill out the questionnaire. Ever since he had this paper sent to me he has only received a small amount of his pay. What can he do to get his full pay check?—Mrs. P. C., Orrick, Mo.

A. The navy department says there is no paper for the wife or mother to fill out. If the allotment, however, has been deducted from his pay, write to Field Services, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, Navy Department, Cleveland, Ohio, giving serial number, name, duty and rate.

Q. My husband and I have been separated six years. He has a bonus from World War I that has never been cashed. He left it with me and said it was mine. He is now in very poor health with a heart ailment. In case of death, could I cash this and if so, how?—Mrs. H. R. R., Battle Creek, Mich.

A. The veterans' administration says this is a legal question. In general the bonus would go to the legal heirs or assigns of the veteran. Suggest that you write to your nearest veterans' administration office and give them full particulars, or consult your attorney.

Q. My husband has chronic arthritis of the spine and right hip and is totally disabled. He is only rated 20 per cent and thinks he should receive more. He was denied more over a year ago. How can he get his pension raised?—Mrs. T. O. G., Milwaukee, Wis.

A. There is a sub-regional veterans administration board in Milwaukee. Suggest you appeal your case to this board. You have right of appeal.

Q. My son volunteered for the navy in November, 1941. He has spent 45 months overseas. I want to know if he is eligible for a discharge or state-side duty and if so who does he get in touch with?—Mrs. J. B., Foxworth, Miss.

A. A general rule is that a "tour of duty" at sea is 24 months when he would become eligible for shore duty in the States. It is, however, up to the theater commander and depends on whether your son enlisted in the regular navy before Pearl Harbor or was drafted afterwards.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for April 7

FRIENDS OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10: 13, 14; Luke 6: 13-16; 8: 1-3; 15: 1, 2; John 3: 1, 2a. MEMORY SELECTION—Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.—John 15: 14.

Jesus is our friend. We may be His friends. Simple words thus present the most profound and satisfying experience of life. There is nothing more wonderful than friendship with Jesus.

We may become the friends of Jesus and make Him our friend simply by putting our faith in Him as Saviour and Lord and thus doing what He commands. He said, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you" (John 15: 14).

What kind of friends did Jesus choose? Did He limit His interest to a select circle of very religious people, or to the cultured and educated folk of His day? It may surprise some Christian people who have made the church a sort of exclusive club to learn how wide were the interests and the love of the Lord whom they profess to serve.

I. Children Were Welcomed (Mark 10: 13, 14).

Observe that the disciples had fallen into that strange mode of thought which excluded the children. They were undoubtedly well-meaning in their desire to keep the Master from the intrusion (as they thought) of little ones. He was engaged in dealing with profound spiritual matters and they felt that He should not be disturbed.

Jesus was displeased. He seldom showed such feelings. Usually He bore silently with their mistakes, but this was so serious that they must be rebuked.

Little children belong with Jesus. Let us not forget it, and let us not fail to make it easy and attractive for them to come to Jesus in our churches and Sunday schools.

II. Witnesses Were Chosen (Luke 6: 13-16).

It is significant that these men were of simple childlike spirit, unlearned in the formality of their day, but with a real genius for friendship both with the Lord and with a needy world.

The close fellowship of our Lord with these men was their course of training for service, and His blessed friendship was the burning fire which kept their hearts warm through the difficult years ahead.

III. Women Were Helped (Luke 8: 1-3).

Yes, and they became the Lord's willing helpers, just as a multitude of their sisters in the faith have been down through the ages.

Women responded readily to the Lord's message of redemption and to many of them He was able to look for loyal and sacrificial service.

Women were not highly thought of in His time on earth. They are little more than useful creatures in heathen lands today. Christianity set womanhood free, raised it to its glorious place of dignity and usefulness. Every woman ought to love Jesus with deep devotion.

Note that some of the wealthy women gave of their means to serve Jesus. It is one of the effective ways in which women carry on work for the Lord today.

IV. Outcasts Were Received (Luke 15: 1, 2).

Publicans and sinners—who would they be in our day? Drunkards, thieves, gamblers, prostitutes, criminals of all kinds.

A beautiful and touching word by G. Campbell Morgan is quoted in Peloubet's Notes. Listen sinner, Jesus "receiveth unto Himself sinners. He takes them into His comradeship, makes familiar friends of them, takes them to His heart. That is the gospel. He is not high-seated on a throne bending down to you and offering you pardon if you will kiss His scepter. He is by you in the pew, He is close to you in your sin, and He will take you as you are with the poison and the virus within you, put His arms about you and press you into a great comradeship." Will you let Him do it—now?

V. Rulers Were Converted (John 3: 1, 2a).

"Not many mighty, not many noble, are called" (I Cor. 1: 26), but thank God, it does not say "not any." Some there were in high places who set aside their pride, their position and all, to come humbly to Jesus.

Nicodemus was one of these. It is true that he came by night, but he came; and that is wonder enough for a man in his position. Read his defense of Jesus amid the scorn of his fellow Sanhedrin members (John 7: 45-53).

These, then, are the friends of Jesus. Do you find your place among them? There is room for you. He is waiting to receive you. Will you come to Him now?

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pain, swelling, feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

CATHEDRAL SPIRES . . . Garden of the Gods, Colorado Springs, where annual sunrise services have been held for 25 years. Top picture shows the famous rocky spires; below, the chorus of 250 voices. Each year Easter sunrise services from the Garden of the Gods are broadcast to the nation.

Garden of Gods Provides Natural Easter Cathedral

By Edward Emerine
WNU Features

More than a quarter of a century ago, the Rev. A. W. Luce, pastor of the Central Christian church of Colorado Springs, was walking and meditating in the Garden of the Gods, his Bible in his hands. When he sat down he opened to the Book of John and read, "Now in the place where he was crucified, there was a garden—there they laid Jesus."

The Reverend Luce looked about him, saw the picturesque Garden of the Gods in a new light, and an idea was born. He talked to other pastors, and they offered their co-operation. The first annual Easter sunrise service was held.

This year, in a church fashioned more than a million years ago by nature, thousands of worshippers will gather for the 25th annual Easter sunrise service. As the first shafts of sunlight are reflected from snow-capped Pikes Peak, a choir of 250 will lift their voices in a song that reverberates from pinnacle to pinnacle among the red rocks and spires.

There will be 20,000 or more people in the Garden of the Gods on Easter morning, but millions more will hear the service in their homes, for it is carried over a nation-wide radio hookup.

Near the monumental cathedral spires, three crosses have been erected. Here will stand the trumpeters who call the assembly to worship. A few hundred yards away, at the base of South Gateway rock, which is more than 300 feet high, the services will be held.

The service again will be predominantly musical with the tones of an electric organ providing the background. A 250-voice capella choir from Colorado Springs will feature the program. Traditional with the service is the well known tenor, Bernard Vessey, who will sing Knapp's "Open the Gates of the Temple."

During the past 25 years, millions of people have attended the sunrise service. They have faced the giant rocks and listened to the choir in nature's great auditorium, acoustically one of the most perfect.

All plans for the Easter sunrise service in the Garden of the Gods are handled by the Colorado Springs ministerial alliance.

Church Ships Heifers to Devasted Areas

Approximately 1,000 heifers from the United States have been shipped to the devastated areas of Europe by the heifer project committee of the Church of the Brethren in order to provide fresh milk for children and to rebuild depleted herds.

Since the committee was set up in June, 1942, contributions of livestock have increased steadily, and plans for 1946 envision sending more than 2,000 animals abroad. Families in Belgium, France, Greece, Holland and Poland have received

War Souvenirs To Take Lives For Long Time

GREELEY, COLO. — Guns and other souvenir weapons brought back to their homes by G.I.s will be killing United States citizens for the next 20 years, G. E. Damon of Colorado state college of education believes. Damon is a firearms expert.

Basing his prediction on studies he has conducted on souvenir enemy weapons, Damon believes the average American's lack of knowledge of dangerous weapons and carelessness with firearms will take many lives in the future.

Recently a 14-year-old boy came to Damon with a shotgun and asked how to open it. The boy's father had given him the gun but had neglected to instruct the lad in its use.

One of the most dangerous weapons is also one of the most popular to come from Europe. It is the Walther P-38 pistol. The army has records of many hundreds of cases of wounds inflicted on the person who uses the pistol, Damon said.

The locking lugs in Japanese rifles are made of metal that is too soft in some cases and too brittle in others, he said. They can't stand much strain and consequently are dangerous even if handled by "experts." Under no conditions should American-made ammunition be used in captured arms.

The best way to insure safety is to keep enemy weapons only as souvenirs and, in most cases, never use them, he said.

most of the donated heifers. Cattle are donated by many people who are not members of the Church of the Brethren. In January 171 heifers were sent to Czechoslovakia. Usually a group of farmers band together, under Brethren or other leadership, and provide a shipment of four or more animals. The heifer project committee in Nappanee, Ind., is notified and takes care of the final arrangements. The overseas shipping of the donated animals is handled by the UNRRA.

MANAGER Eddie Dyer of the Cardinals has about all the pitchers two teams could use. Your guess would be that Eddie has nothing to worry about. But the first section of any manager's job is to worry about something.

Two of Manager Dyer's worries now are Johnny Grodzicki and George Munger.

Eddie Dyer

Johnny Grodzicki, from Nanticoke, Pa., is an ex-paratrooper, who is still working on a shrapnel wound in his right leg. George Munger, passing the officer's school test in the Pacific area, has made such a fine record the army doesn't want to let him go. The main point of this yarn is that Dyer believes both men could have been two of the best pitchers in baseball.

"When I had Grodzicki at Columbus in 1941," Dyer says, "I thought he was the best minor league pitcher I ever saw. Six-foot-one, 185 pounds, he had what you might call everything. That season Johnny won 19 games and lost 5 when his record might just as well have been 22 wins and 2 defeats. In addition to a fine arm he had both head and heart, but an uncertain right leg due to a shrapnel wound which has been healing slowly. But he is still undisciplined. In shape Johnny might easily have been a 25 or 28-game winner."

"George Munger, in my book, is one of the best pitchers in Cardinal history. In his last season with the Cardinals in 1944, Munger won 11 games and lost 3. But he was just beginning to find himself. He is now on duty in the Far East and I don't know when we'll get him back. Munger is another who might have led the league."

These two are not the only cases. The game through 1946 will give you many others from other clubs.

Vets Will Dominate

The pennant races of 1946 will feature largely returning players from the service forces. Among those I might mention are Bob Feller, Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Tex Hughson, Joe Gordon, Bobby Doerr, Bill Dickey, Phil Rizzuto, Johnny Mize, Hank Greenberg, Dick Wakefield, Spud Chandler, Charlie Keller, Johnny Beazley, Howie Pollet, Peeewe Reese, Pete Reiser, Country Slaughter, Terry Moore, Dave Ferriss, Dom DiMaggio, and many, many more.

It is from this ex-service list that you will find the pennant winners the leading hitters and the leading pitchers. They will dominate the double show. There will be others who were not in service who will play good ball.

Here is an example. In 1945, Snuffy Stirnweiss led the American league hitters with a season's average of .309. Yet it is the opinion of many smart baseball men that it will take a mark of .360 or .370 to lead the punching parade this season in the junior circuit. I put this query up to six American league veterans, including Bill Dickey and George Selkirk, who know their way around. There were four or five others from American league clubs. It was also their opinion that the 1945 winning mark of .309 wouldn't finish in the first 12.

Pitching Won't Matter

"What about the better pitching that is coming in?" I asked. "I mean such men as Feller, Hughson, etc."

"This will make little difference," one veteran answered. "Hitters like Ted Williams, Wakefield, Greenberg, DiMaggio, Keller and many others will still keep on hitting the ball. Good pitching can wreck the ordinary hitter. But it never wrecks the true hitter who knows how to swing a bat and get his hits."

"The National league with Phil Cavarretta, Tommy Holmes and others was far ahead of the American league last season. That won't happen again. Watch and see. The American league will take back its old spot as the harder-hitting league, and it will have to face pitching that is just as good."

S. American Baseball

No one can shake Larry MacPhail, the Dodgers' owner, loose from the idea that baseball is headed for a big boom in Latin America and that what we often call "The National Game" will soon be the national game of Mexico, Panama, Venezuela, Colombia, Cuba and other tropical spots.

"The answer is simple enough," MacPhail says with emphatic gestures. "The kids of these countries are baseball crazy. It is the only game most of them want to play. It is the only game most of them care to talk about. Their knowledge of baseball today is amazing. I'm not guessing about this, for I've been in the middle of it at least part of it. 'To my mind this will be the best possible build-up for any good-neighbor policy for Latin American friendship. Baseball could do more good in this respect than all the diplomats we could ever assemble."

Flame Cultivation Passes Farm Tests

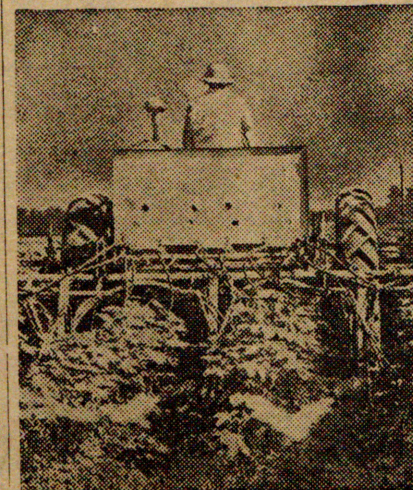

Suitable for Hard-Stemmed Field Crops

Flame cultivation of farm crops has been proven sound at Cornell university and Mississippi State college. Tests made with sugar cane and with cotton have proved this method suitable for hard-stemmed row crops. Tests are still being conducted on other crops.

The flame cultivator consists of an ignition system burning diesel or tractor fuel, with burner heads mounted behind tractors so that two flames hit the rows from opposite sides.

At Mississippi it was found that any plant which is sufficiently tall for its leaves to escape contact with the flame has to be removed by hand. Johnson grass and "pig weeds" are resistant to repeated flaming when the leaves are not struck, while some plants are repeatedly flamed.

Flaming versus hoeing showed no difference in the values obtained on seed cotton, lint and spinning. Seed showed a higher significant difference for free fatty acid and significant difference for grade in favor of flaming. Under this system it is now possible to produce cotton without hand labor by cross-ploving, flame cultivation and machine picking. Other farm crops promise to fall under this mechanical method of operation.

Swine Tuberculosis Spread by Chickens

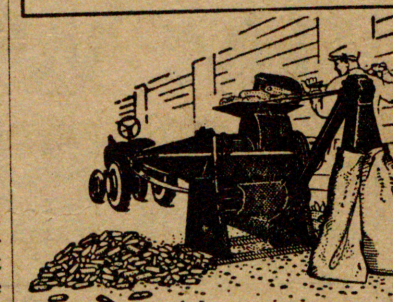

Tuberculosis in swine increased 10 per cent last year, according to the American Veterinary Medical association. One hog in every 14 slaughtered, showed tuberculosis lesions.

Such meat, when inspected, must be condemned. This represents a heavy financial loss to the swine raising industry.

Tuberculosis in swine is not spread from animal to animal, unless the udder of the sow is infected. The control and eradication of the disease in swine depend on eradicating tuberculosis in cattle and poultry.

As old-aged flocks of chickens are the chief spreaders of tuberculosis to swine, farmers should keep poultry out of hog lots, and dispose of the older birds each year.

Improved Machinery Corn Sheller

This corn sheller, product of International Harvester, has a capacity of 100 to 150 bushels of husked corn per hour. It can be operated by any one-plow tractor engine or motor with capacity of 5 to 10 h.p.

It is constructed to shell corn for sale to elevators or to meet the immediate feeding requirements. Elevator and cob stackers may be attached. The corn travels downward in line of feed. A feature is a one-piece cylinder.

DDT Has an Important Rival in Velsicol 1068

A compound of chlorinated hydrocarbon, product of the University of Illinois insect experiments, is said to be three to four times as toxic to houseflies as DDT and twice as toxic to potato-beetle larvae and to pea and spirea aphids. It is about equal to DDT in its effect on mosquitoes. Other new competitors of DDT include the British insecticide Gammexane and TDE, tetrachloro-diphenyl-ethane.

Yoke Frock for Mother-Daughter A Simple Twosome for Spring

2-10 yrs.

HERE is a sparkling parallel idea for mother and daughter—pretty round yoked frocks with cool cap sleeves, snugly fitting waist and full cut skirt. Use a brightly striped or flowered fabric for the lower part of the dress and make the yoke of a contrasting shade. Grown-up and growing up charmers.

Pattern 8881 is for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14, upper dress, 2 1/2 yards of 35 or 39-inch material; contrasting yoke and sleeves, 3/4 yard; 6 yards ric. fac. Pattern No. 8882 comes in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. Size 4, lower dress, 1 1/2 yards of 35 or 39-inch material; contrasting yoke and sleeves, 3/4 yard.

Smart Twopiecer

SO SIMPLE to make you'll want several versions of this smart two piece style. The wrap-around blouse is cut all in one piece—has a youthful neckline and the briefest of sleeves. The dirndl skirt is perfect spring-through-summer twosome.

Stocking feet can be made more durable by rubbing candle wax or paraffin on heel and toe.

Half a potato well done is better than a whole potato half done. Cut large potatoes in half before baking and save fuel.

To prevent rice from sticking to the kettle while boiling, grease the bottom before adding boiling water.

To remove perspiration stains from white clothes, dampen the garments with lemon juice and salt before putting them in soapy water.

Wax your curtain rods with ordinary floor wax to prevent them from rusting. The wax will also help the curtains slide back and forth more easily.

New Cuts Give Diamonds More Fire and Brilliance

For nearly 300 years, European and American gem craftsmen have cut 98 per cent of their diamonds in the "brilliant" form, convinced that its 58-facet design reflected a greater amount of light than any larger or smaller number of surfaces, says Collier's. Recently, however, three New York firms created and patented new designs of their own—the King Cut with 86 facets, the Multi-Facet Cut with 98 and the Magna-Facet Cut with 102—all three of which give a diamond much more fire and brilliance.

McGEE'S CAMPAIGN GOING STRONG

Walter H. McGee, 604 Second Ave., Joliet, who is seeking the Republican nomination for sheriff of Will County in next Tuesday's primary election, will be victorious by a comfortable margin, it was predicted by A. F. Schupp, county chairman.

Walter H. McGee

McGee, a chief deputy sheriff for the past seven years, has served under former sheriff Joseph J. O'Neill and the present sheriff, Ralph Newkirk. During this period he has aided in bringing about many innovations which has brought the Will County sheriff's office up to the standards of other county police departments throughout the state.

McGee is married to the former Myrtle Ahlstrand, who with one daughter, Lois, reside at 604 Second Ave. Another daughter Mrs. Donald E. Spencer, resides in Indianapolis.

The new lists of registered voters are ready for those interested to vote in April primaries next Tuesday. We are in the second precinct and vote at 94th Avenue and 151st, the red brick school house. Now is the time to pick the county officers that are favorable to our community. Some new registrants are: Harry Bower, Eugene Bower, Mr. Sloane, Mr. Lemke and Max Goepfner.

Donald Maue had his tractor going and the spring weather has brought increased activity such as making gardens, fencing and landscaping. Building is being curtailed unless for Veterans. New wells have been promised.

Church services are held at 157th St., and 113th Court each Sunday at 3 p. m. Come to Worship and stay for a visit with your neighbors.

There is quite a little opportunity for helping ourselves by raising at least what we can on our Estates. If you have not tried it you will be surprised. Some families have raised enough chickens and rabbits to keep them in groceries with a small garden. Another is equipped for truck gardening. The vast drainage ditch could easily be utilized for a Holland dike and much of the land that was waste is now tillable. There is a project on the way to start a small theatre for entertainments, dancing and roller skating. Are you in favor of organizing our community?

Items of interest to the community may be written and submitted to Mr. George Crawford for publishing in this column. Mr. Crawford will be the new correspondent for Wooded Estates. Let us make this a news column to be proud of.

BUSBEY

REPUBLICAN TO CONGRESS

FRED E. BUSBEY proved himself a champion of the G.I.'s by his outstanding work on the World War Veterans' Legislation Committee. His 25 years of service in the American Legion and the V.F.W. provided unequalled experience in handling the problems of the Service Man and Woman.

During this critical reconversion period, sound, solid men of proven business experience are essential. Fred E. Busbey deserves your support on his record of service.

As a member of the 78th U. S. Congress, he demonstrated great ability to be ranked as an outstanding legislator. His knowledge and keen understanding of national and international problems and his ability to clearly and fearlessly express himself gave voice to the people of the Third District.

FRED E. BUSBEY STANDS FOR:

1. Representative government as against bureaucracy.
2. Against the employment of anyone in the Federal government who has not first established his unquestioned loyalty to the United States of America.
3. The termination of the emergency war powers that are at present given to the executive branch of our government.
4. A decentralization of government in Washington.
5. Friendly cooperation with all other nations and the maintenance of armed strength adequate to preserve our peace and security.
6. The reduction of conflict between management and labor by insisting on a fair and honest deal for both.
7. A practical program of increased production that will get merchandise on the market for consumers, free from the bungling interference of the New Deal administrators.
8. The elimination of all unnecessary employees from the Federal payroll.
9. The increase and maintenance of wages to all white collared employees on a comparable scale paid to all other classes of workers.
10. Less government in business and more business in government.

SNAKES

By Forest Preserves Dist. Cook County

If you were a snake you would never have an earache or get dust in your eye. They have inner ears but no trace of an outside ear. A sleeping snake will pay no attention to shouts or banging on a tin pan, but rouses immediately when man or animal walks near. Apparently snakes hear by feeling the vibrations of the earth.

Snakes are very short-sighted, their eyes being specially constructed for focusing on nearby small objects. That glassy stare is produced by a transparent cap or lid which covers the eye and cannot be moved. The eyeball inside is just as movable as yours.

Snakes have a forked tongue. Approach him and that tongue flicks in and out very rapidly. It is NOT a stinger. It is a feeler and also an instrument by which objects are smelled. It carries tiny dust particles or bits of anything it touches back into two little cavities in the forward part of the roof of the mouth called Jacobson's organ which helps them to smell.

The snake is the most misunderstood and abused of all animals. If you can not over come abhorrence or fear of them, leave them alone. Do not kill them. They are valuable destroyers of mice, rats, gophers etc. Rattlesnakes are harmless other wise all 18 species of snakes in the Chicago area are utterly harmless.

War Weary World Demands Release From Insecurity

The following article is by F. E. Burnham, Brigadier-General of the English army residing at Halcyon Hot Springs, British Columbia:

A war-weary world demands release from the curse of insecurity but so long as human nature is dominated by national, racial and religious hatreds there can be no peace. During world history there have been 268 years of peace and thousands of peace treaties. Since the end of hostilities in Europe two agreements have been broken. The Atlantic Charter was ditched at Yalta by the Big Three which is another of our crimes.

For this weary world there is predicted a time of trouble such as never was, with "men's hearts failing them for fear". In postwar reconstruction there is need of a policy of courage, determination and justice, rather than one of political expediency. Few things are more important in Europe than a strong and independent Poland. The atrocities committed by the Germans in the west of Poland were no greater than those committed by the Russians in the east, and between the two there is little choice.

It is not so long ago that the London Times accused King Victor Emmanuel of treachery. It the Times is looking for treachery it need not leave its own bailiwick as Montenegro and Armenia have learned to their sorrow. King Victor Emmanuel is a monarch of exceptional character and cultural attainments and an example for all, as a king should be.

Montenegro and Armenia were our only allies in the First Great War. Where are they now? A cultured Englishman, a member of the House of Commons and a cabinet minister, remarked, "It is regrettable but true that England will go over to her enemies and betray those who have fought for her in difficult times." That is the reward received by 100,000 Armenians who have fought for her in difficult times. "That is the reward received by 100,000 Armenians who fought for us in the First Great War."

It is an axiom that peace is founded on justice to the smaller nations. How have they fared? Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania have been wiped off the map without a protest from anyone of the Big Three. Thousands of peace treaties through the ages have not halted the bloody scourge of war. The average life of a peace treaty is 2 years and the duration between great wars has been short from 39 to 20 years. Man, that evil genius, marches from one orgy of death and destruction to another. His acts and promises are just scraps of paper. During the First Great War our propaganda was the "Scrape of Paper torn up by the Kaiser." In discussing this with a prominent London author, he remarked, "We make a great ado about the scrap of paper torn up by the Kaiser but we have torn up a whole basketful." The Polish Treaty has gone into the same old basket. The fate of Montenegro and Armenia is being shared by others in this war, and the reward received by the Poles who have fought so gallantly on land, sea and in the air.

When the Russians reached the Vistula, word was sent to the Polish underground to rise and fight. They arose. Men, women and children fought desperately for 63 days and the Russians only 250 yards away never raised a hand. 250,000 Poles died—victims of treachery. It has been quite apparent that we have been fighting a war to pull down one devil, only to put another devil up.

All through history, and now as much as ever, the rights of smaller nations against the designs of strong and unscrupulous neighbors are in jeopardy. Montenegro, Armenia, Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Poland have found to their sorrow that the so-called Christian world is as deceitful and as treacherous as hell. That is the truth. All have the courage to criticize the faults and crimes of others, but few have the courage to tell of our own. —F. E. Burnham, Brigadier General.

Elected to the State Legislature in 1938 and 1940 and nominated in 1942 but resigned to volunteer for active service in the Navy. Earned six battle stars for service on aircraft carrier U. S. S. Essex in the Pacific.

Ability—

Hon. Elmer J. Schnackenberg, former Speaker of the Illinois House of Representatives, says: "To citizens of the Seventh Senatorial District, who inquire in regard to Arthur W. Sprague and his service in the House of Representatives, I have said and I now repeat that he has been a highly intelligent and thorough legislator. During the time that he served under me while I was speaker of the House and for some years prior thereto, I observed the mastery with which he presented his position on various important pieces of legislation. His support of a measure increased substantially its chances of passage. In opposition he was always formidable. The experience which he has had in the legislature and his innate ability combine to make him a legislator valuable not only to the district which sends him to Springfield but to the state as a whole."

Writes Farewell Note on "Blackouts" Revue

The following is a copy of a farewell note written by Mrs. Mable Hart, of the "Elderlovelies" in Ken Murray's record smashing revue, "The Blackouts" which is now in its 4th or 5th consecutive year showing at the El Capitan Theatre in Hollywood and of which our readers will recall, Mrs. Hart formerly of New Lenox, is one of the "Elderlovelies". The opening of this show is a chorus, by eye arresting, breath-stopping Cuties, billed properly as, "The Glamorlovelies." The last line of their song intimates that they'll probably be in "Blackouts" 50 years hence, the lights go out—come on again almost at once, and in the same spots occupied by the "Nearly Seventeens", are NOW, the "Nearly Seventies". The speed and unexpectedness of the change adds to the merriment of the illusion.

For over three years the youngsters have been dressing with the oldsters, but recently, Mr. Murray made another of his gracious gestures and built the golden voiced silvertops a special and spacious room of their own. The night the "Elderlovelies" moved out, Mrs. Hart left the following note of farewell to the "Kuyicle Kids". It is filled with warmth and sincerity:

"Dear Glamour Lovlies: Old Mable is just moving next door but in reality I am moving into another WORLD and OUT of one, whose environment and youth I had learned to love and understand.

A line from a famous poem reads like this: 'I learned about women from HER.' Well I learned about youth from you! After more than three years of almost constant association with adolescent youth, sophisticated youth, Timorous youth, Belligerent youth, Precocious youth I found that each type was Lovable and all of it was wonderful, Glamorous, Glorious youth!

I saw them come and go down there, and became attached to each one, but naturally became more closely attached to those I knew the longest, like Joyce, Becky, Jerry, and Lucky. Then along came dreamy eyed Elaine, sprightly Mary, luscious Lynn and Jean, doll-faced Doris, nonchalant Mary and genial Connie. I must have worried my way into your confidence, because you shared with me your tears and triumphs, your loves and hates, even your secret ambitions and failures and I was flattered by your request for my advice.

"You knew that beneath the surface of 'old rough neck Mable', there was a heart of a woman who had experienced all of the heartaches and yearnings and frustrations that you had, and because of my own child I was able to see things from the 'mother angle'. The all absorbing, protecting mother love that He inspired, made me live each mother part that I ever played, because that love was Real. It was born the moment I first held his tiny, new form to my breast and realized that I had not only given him life but was sustaining it. The overwhelming emotion of that supreme moment can only be described by Mothers—the birth of a tender but fierce devotion, which nothing can duplicate or destroy. At that very moment we begin to make plans for them—and dream of the time when they will be, 'Washingtons', 'Lincolns', 'Rosa Bonheurs', 'Florence Nightingales', 'Joan of Arcs', of their day. To some mothers come the Heaven of dreams fulfilled, to some poor darlings, the hell of dreams shattered, cruelly so.

"Several times you girls and others have told me that I resembled the famous Billie Burke. At one time I did—but today I am a far cry from that glamorous star, because the toll and anxiety of the years took its toll from me in white hair, lessening spontaneity and the usual ebullient point that comes with age so I am content to just play Myself like the plump, white-haired, smiling faced mothers who understandingly, patiently, lovingly guide the destiny of many millions of homes in the universe, such a mother I played in Warner Brothers' 'Over the Wall'. With Billie and me its a case of 'Piquancy versus Stolidity' Billie's child was nurtured in luxury, with maids etc. My child knew only a Mother for its nurse and the 'hop-skip-and-jump' early education, on the roads, travelling in slow uncomfortable trains, sleeping in cold, cheerless hotel rooms, eating cheap, unappetizing food, with bodies that cried for rest and minds equally as tired. It was a thankless, plodding grind but the kid and I battled it through and that adversity formed the foundation of a love and understanding that has lasted throughout the years.

"When Ken Murray took this old act, 'off the shelf' put it back into circulation, which was destined to become internationally famous, no one was more thrilled than Jimmy—he realized fully what the break meant to me and our rejoicing was mutual.

"Each one of you know how YOU rejoiced when you landed in Ken's show, where, incidentally, each one of us learned the same thing about him. We thought that he was as harboiled as he pretends, when actually he's a regular old softee, a real push over for sentiment, providing—its delicately clothed and disguised, but oh mammy, can he be tough with anyone who tries to put one over on him? He's been a grand boss to all of us and such favors as giving each one of us $25 for working on the 'Intrepid' air craft carrier, which was a vacation in itself; for paying us when we did not work and for Christmas bonuses etc., is something that no manager ever did, that I worked for and I doubt if you girls ever will either.

"Well this letter is developing into a script, and I'm going to close it with a note that my son wrote in one of my scrap books last summer, and when you read it you will understand why I am inserting it into this letter:

"Mother, you will have many hours of pleasurable reminiscing from your tattered and fading scrapbooks—memories can be kind, gentle, humorous or glorious. Or if we're silly enough to let them; they can hurt. Bill Shakespeare was a remarkably shrewd philosopher as well as playwright. His quotations are outnumbered, and then but slightly, only by those of my beloved book, the Bible, and he said, 'The evil that men do lives after them, the Good is oft interred with their bones.'

"So too with memories, if we let them. The errors, the misfires, the shattered remnants of broken plans, the well nigh intangible gossamer of once resplendent dreams, these can bring th eheartaches if Relived—but the human comedy, the ridiculous and great moments may be dragged out again and donned, like a favorite costume, each appearance as fresh and delightful as a smash hit 'First Night'. There are many such bits of showy finery in those books of yours. Mother may you know again the warm thrill of reliving each and every one to the fullest. Your son Jimmy."

"And so I say the latter to YOU Darlings—when your scrap books are getting yellow with age, my YOUR'S contain such bits of showy finery, only with the stamp of big Time, and may you know again the thrill of reliving each to the fullest is my wish as I dash away some silly tears—you get that way in old age, but when that time comes to you, I hope that a dozen or two sweet young things like you, will fuss over you and make you feel that you are still worth while, as you have done for us.

"Loads of love, and come over and see me sometime sez, old Mable."

OR

YOU HIRE—someone to cut your lawn, or help with the housework suddenly an accident and you are held responsible.

ELECTRIC BROODERS

get Chicks off to a Flying Start!

What to do before your chicks arrive

Move brooder house to a well-drained spot—preferably one where no chicks have been raised for two years.

Make certain the brooder house has plenty of direct sunlight, fresh air, is free from drafts.

Thoroughly clean, scrape, and scrub the brooder house walls and floor with a hot lye water solution.

Clean and disinfect brooder, fountains, and other equipment to prevent spread of disease.

Start the electric brooder a few days before the chicks arrive to get heat regulated and to dry out brooder house and litter.

Be sure to use brooders according to their rated chick capacity. . . a temperature of 95 degrees to 100 degrees is desirable at the start, governed somewhat by the actions of the chicks. Normally, the temperature should be lowered 5 degrees each week until the 85 degree mark is reached.

Cold snaps hold no terrors for baby chicks arriving at poultryman Howard Mann's place near Kankakee. They step right from the shipping box into the protective warmth of electric brooders where they spend their first critical weeks in complete comfort and safety.

By using thermostatically controlled electric brooders, Howard has cut chick losses to a minimum . . . has produced more healthy birds with less work and worry.

Plan now to step-up your poultry profits by raising more of the chicks you buy. Visit your farm equipment dealer the next time you are in town and select one of the chick-saving electric brooders available. If he is unable to supply you with one at this time, drop us a card and we will immediately mail you approved plans for a homemade brooder which you can build from materials on hand.

Electricity for Brooding and other farm chores is available to more than 89% of all the farms in the area served by this Company.

Sure you have---nearly every sewing circle, ladies' aid, church, fraternal organization, or any other form of group activity has one. But---in nearly all cases---nominations can ALSO be made from the floor. That's the AMERICAN way, and it has worked well.

In politics the "Central Committee"---ELECTED BY THE VOTERS as their precinct committeemen---is a sort of nominating committee but it does not forbid OTHER nominations. What it does do is give to the voters of its own party a list of candidates which it feels are most worthy of their ballots. They have the option of voting for these candidates, or any others. But, as the members of the "Central Committee" must carry RESPONSIBILITY of later electing the party nominees to office, and of making sure that they render public service worthy of the party that elected them, the members of the "Central Committee"---which were themselves ELECTED to party leadership by the voters---naturally hope that their recommendations will be accepted.

There you have, stated briefly and clearly, the reasons why the Will County Republican Central Committee has endorsed certain candidates at the Republican primary on April 9th. It COULD have remained in the background, and refrained from doing so. BUT---would that have been fair to the Republican voters who naturally want the strongest possible ticket in the field? You can answer that question for yourself.

AN OPEN LETTER

to

George R. Perrine

Republican State Central Committeeman

April 3, 1946

Dear George:

What did you do to Arnold P. Benson, the Republican candidate for Secretary of State, in the 1944 election? Did you help him or did you only pretend to do so while watching him go down to defeat before a Democratic candidate?

Wasn't Stratton scheduled to run for State Treasurer in 1946?
As Stratton's Manager, will you explain to the voters why you placed him in the hottest spot on the ticket as candidate for Congressman-at-large?

Are you so busy building up the steam roller of your Barr-Schupp-Perrine Machine you have no time to consider the problems of Republican candidates for office who are running on their ability, their experience and their qualifications rather than as favorite sons of yours?

Are you campaigning as a supporter of Governor Green or the Barrett group or both?

Are you actually working for the Republican party or for George R. Perrine?

Yours Truly,
signed JAMES L. KACHERES

Off the Runway

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 613-3
by 2nd Lt. Elyne Conel

Knight On Super Charger! Years ago knights swept maidens off their feet by galloping up on white horses. But now that's sissy stuff! An American hero dashed clear across the Atlantic in a plane to propose to his wartime sweetheart. She recovered from surprise and excitement in time to say yes!

Neither Too Old nor Too Young! Recently Aunt Lizzie Devers, 115 years young, was piloted over the Cherokee "Trail of Tears" by which she went West years ago. And Mrs. Harry Frank lin, 100 years young, said of her first plane ride, "horseback riding is more exciting." A six month old baby has already logged fifty hours air time!

Check Points! A hop worth making is to Milwaukee's new airport. Located on Lake Michigan frontage just a few hundred yards from the business district, it's one of the first "door stop" airports. More than 100 planes of all types will participate in Chicago's Army Day Celebration Saturday April 6th. Sharing the spotlight with President Truman will be a jet-propelled ship that's scheduled to leave Indianapolis, and fly over Chicago's reviewing stand 18 minutes later, 63 airports
"skirt" Chicago. Two Helicopter claims: Vibration troubles have been eliminated, pilots can be trained in 10 hours. CAA encourages plane manufacturers to make planes with folding wings, to save hanger space, and fliers' cash.

Up-Portunity-Safety Link. In the Naval Air Exhibit at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry, Saturday I climbed into the "Cockpit" of a Link Trainer used for instruction in instrument flight. After getting some expert supervision by the attendant in charge
I pulled the top shut, simulating "blind flight". Then without moving one foot forward over the Museum floor. I worked the controls and instruments, and "travelled at a speed up to 400 miles per hour!" Miked instructions were given to fly the beam, which I did, finally reaching the cone of silence, making a 45 degree right turn, and approaching the "airport" for a landing. I was so busy trying to "stay on the beam" that the landing was made 10 feet off the ground at 250 miles per hour. Aviation enthusiasts can try their hand on many training machines. The Link is just one of the museum's many action packed, instructive aviation exhibits.

Over Heard: in Chicago Hammond
Airport's brand new flight office: "Dr.
Harold E. Klemptner solid March 5th in a Cub". "The field has a new UC 78 Cessna and 7 new Cub Trainers".
Wayne Wallar solid March 16th, David Boron on the 20th. "The new restaurant will be serving food in June".
Chicago-Hammond now awards first soloists with diplomas and tiny wings!
Pilot Charlie Compton owns his own
AT6. The two line boys, Richard Kaupke and Norbert Nadzela want to be mechanics.

At Rubinkam: "Davis, Jr. made his first solo". "The new Beverly Fliers Club has high ambitions!"

Candy: Sunday afternoon I asked Candy, the gal student pilot, if she wanted to go along with me into the sunshine for a short flight from Rubinkam Airport to Chicago-Hammond to Proper Airport and back. On this, her first trip out of the practice area, Candy became a bit excited when she spotted Chicago-Hammond and even more so when she saw how thick the traffic was. I entered the traffic pattern back of an Ercoupe and in front of a PT 19, landed and pulled to the left and faced the landing runway. About ten fast planes landed in quick succession, and with each Candy's eyes opened wider. After stopping in at the big, bright flight office and "hangerflying" with Harriet Drabek, Flight Office manager, we headed for Prosper Field. Upon "birds-eyeing" Prosper's new T-hangers, I asked Candy to point the way to Rubinkam and was able to follow her finger straight to the field.

est hand-wrought jewelry will be experienced in your admiration for the faultless craftsmanship which distinguishes the monuments in our Rainbow Line. They are gracefully proportioned and there is an amazing degree of perfection in detail, such as the clean-etched molds and panels, the true, deep lettering and the polished surfaces which provide a jewel-like brilliance of impressive dignity.

We are proud to have you see our extensive exhibit. We know you will be agreeably surprised to see how reasonably our monuments are priced. We buy in

Mokena Service Club:
Sorry I have not gotten around to write sooner but just can't seem to keep up with my writing.

I want to thank you for the five dollars, also for sending me the News-Bulletin. It sure makes a guy feel good to get a paper from his home town and read about all the different things going on back home.

I am stationed at the Fritzlar Air Base which is about 120 miles north of Frankfurt, Germany. I am working in the Air Corps Supply and getting along very well so can't complain. We make trips to different Air Depots throughout Germany so get a chance to do some traveling and see different parts of the country. I better close for now and soon hope to be back in Mokena again.

At twilight when twilight hour draws near,
And sunset flames the sky,
We think of you dear father
And the happy days gone by.
Thots of you come drifting back,
Within our dreams to stay,
And we are glad to know that you are resting with God,
When twilight ends the day.

New County Hospital Advocated For West Side Of Chicago

In a short address before the Western Springs Republican Woman's Club last Wednesday, Eugene R. Flitcraft of Oak Park, a candidate for Cook County Commissioner, suburban towns, on the Republican ticket, advocated:

"1. Publishing Cook County Board meeting proceedings weekly or monthly in the local papers so that every taxpayer and voter will know what is going on in the County building.

"2. Build a Cook County Hospital for the suburban and rural area because the present Cook County Hospital is overcrowded and inconvenient to the outlying sections of Cook County. This suburban Cook County Hospital should be right straight west of Chicago so that both north and south ends of Cook County have easy access.

"3. Abolish and clean out the ambulance-chasers out of the Cook County Hospital. Usually an insurance company makes a settlement with the victim whether their driver-policyholder is in the right or wrong. The ambulance chaser 'nabs' the injured as they come into the Hospital and while the poor soul is in the midst of getting his broken leg set, the ambulance-chaser-shyster lawyer says, 'Here, buddy, sign here and we'll get a settlement for you'. With this stroke of the pen the injured suits himself out of about half of a settlement he was going to get any way.

"4. Continue the investigation into tax sales scandals. Where there is smoke there is fire. Too many sky-scrapers 'given away' can only mean increased taxes for the property owner in the community.

"After being elected your county commissioner," Flitcraft added, "there will be a lot of other worth-while proposals advanced."

VOTING FOR

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR

STATE SENATOR

41st DISTRICT

At least 75 per cent of the people need more and better food. Realization of the goal of full employment will permit our people to satisfy their needs for food and clothing materials and assure farmers a market for their products. Martin will support the continuance of price guarantees to farmers at levels which will encourage full production and assure them of a fair return for their products. He believes all agricultural programs and planning should be designed to eliminate discrimination against rural areas and give farm people the same social and economic benefits enjoyed by city dwellers.
